

Gender Pay Gap

The Gender Pay Gap is the difference in earnings between all men and all women who work in an organisation. It relates specifically to the percentage difference between the mean or average hourly earnings of men and women and the difference between the median or mid-point salary for men and women.

All organisations with more than 250 employees are now required to publish some key gender pay gap statistics. Gender pay reporting is not the same as equal pay. Equal pay deals with the pay differences between men and women who carry out the same jobs, similar jobs or work of equal value. This has been the law since 1971.

The Woodland Trust's approach is that we pay all employees fairly for the role they perform regardless of gender. However, like many organisations there can be a difference between the pay for each gender when pay is looked at as a whole, across the organisation and an average taken.

Some of the reasons for this disparity include:

The different types of roles men and women perform. For example we have a lot of administrative roles that are predominantly held by women and lower paid than some of our forestry/outdoor roles which are more likely, but not exclusively, held by men.

Although we have both men and women in our workforce who work part-time or work flexibly, the majority of these are currently working mothers and their reduced working hours bring down their total pay and therefore the average female pay figure.

Women taking maternity leave or a career break are included in the statistics as employees with zero earnings, which increases the pay gap.

Bonus Payments

The mean gender bonus gap for the Woodland Trust is 0%, as no bonuses were paid

The median gender bonus gap for the Woodland Trust is 0%, as no bonuses were paid

The percentage of:

male employees in the Woodland Trust receiving a bonus is 0%

female employees in the Woodland Trust receiving a bonus is 0%

When calculated in accordance with The Equality Act 2010 (Gender Pay Gap Information) Regulations 2017, the Woodland Trust has a gender pay gap of:

in the mean or average salaries of men and women

The mean gender pay gap for the Woodland Trust is 12.5%, based on a mean hourly rate of £16.39 for men and a mean hourly rate of £14.34 for women in the median or mid-point salaries for men and women

The median gender pay gap for the Woodland Trust is 13.1%, based on a median hourly rate of £15.32 for men and a median hourly rate of £13.31 for women

This compares with an

in average salaries of men and women in the UK

Woodland Trust pay quartiles percentages of men and women are as follows

The percentage split between male and female employees whose standard hourly rate places them at or below the lower quartile*

The percentage split between male and female employees whose standard hourly rate places them above the lower quartile* but at or below the median.

The percentage split between male and female employees whose standard hourly rate places them above the median but at or below the upper quartile*

The percentage split between male and female employees whose standard rate places them above the upper quartile*

*Quartiles are the values that divide a list of numbers into quarters. The four quarters that divide a data set into quartiles are:

- The lowest 25% of numbers.
- The next lowest 25% of numbers (up to the median).
- The second highest 25% of numbers (above the median).
- The highest 25% of numbers.

25%

While we have a good balance of males and females in higher paid roles, we have many more females than males in lower paid roles, which also tend to be part time roles.

Some of the reasons for this are outlined above; though taking up a part time role in a lower paid role may be a choice that individuals, both female and male, have consciously chosen.

The Trust already offers the following which can help to decrease the gender pay gap:

- Flexible working terms open to both men and women
- Regular monitoring and reviews of pay and progression
- Reviewing career development and talent programme

The Trust is committed to equal pay and where possible reducing the gender pay gap, and will continue with the following activity:

- Regular monitoring of salaries and reviews of pay and progression
- Training of line managers in non-discriminatory recruitment and promotion practices
