

Dunollie Wood

Welcome to Scotland's Rainforest!

Scotland's Rainforest is one of our most precious habitats - as important as tropical rainforest, but rarer.

Also known as Atlantic woodland, Scotland's west coast has some of the best remaining rainforest in Europe thanks to a combination of high rainfall and mild, year-round temperatures. Rainforest sites like Dunollie provide a refuge for some of the world's rarest bryophytes and lichens, with over 200 species found in this wood alone. It is the diversity of rare bryophytes and lichens that make Scotland's rainforest internationally important. Besides maintaining humidity, thick carpets of dripping mosses, layering liverworts, epiphytic ferns and colourful fungi like the rare hazel gloves fungus, give the rainforest a unique and magical feel.

Unwaymarked routes

○ Rainforest Ramble 1.5 miles / 2.5km | Moderate | Allow 1 hour

Explore ancient woodland, admire huge beech trees, and discover recovering rainforest, all with dramatic views to the Western Isles. This path also links with other routes to explore the wider community.

Mostly an uneven narrow path with short moderately steep slopes with one long steep slope. Extra care may be required when these slopes are wet. The route also includes some wide flat tarred sections, two kissing gates and two sets of steps near the car park. The route includes a short section on the edge of a field. Please keep dogs on a lead or under close control here.
